- Military posts and installations have been set up on and around Mount Omul, in the Bucegi Mountains, for three purposes:
  - a. Training of Alpine troops and mountain artillery;
  - b. Combat against anti-Communist resistance forces, with headquarters in the Fagaras Mountains; and
  - c. Radio and meteorological service for Rumanian and Soviet air units based on the Stalin (Brasov) and neighboring airfields.
- 2. Troops, some of which are drawn from the Stalin garrison, are stationed at three points, east, south, and northeast of Mount Omul. The largest forces and battalion staffs are at Sinaia. Various advance posts have been established in the foothills and on Mount Omul. All posts are connected with general headquarters either by telephone or radio.
- 3. Troops have met with little success against the resistance forces, which are active in their areas. The resistance partisans make raids into the plains and along the main highways. Sabotage has been reported from the industrial district of Stalin. Wood-cutters confirm the existence of resistance bands in the mountains of Targu-Sacuese, Harghita, and Buzaului.
